THE EXCHEQUER BILL .- Not having in readiness the first number of the series of articles in contemplation on the subject of the Exchequer, it may not be ami-s to indicate the sature of the re-And, while Congress is in session, the sentiment of with much accuracy on any subject, by consulting the immediate Representatives of the people. We refer to opinions expressed by the Members telu-tive to the merits of measures when not biased by political considerations.

Of course we have had neither time nor opporunity to converse with a great many of the mem-bers. Yet it is our gratification to be able to state, on the very best authority, that several of the most distinguished Senators-including more than one generally recognized as a "leader"-whom the Executive scarce hoped would favor his measures, have declared that " with a few modifications.

bill as the one presented by the Secretary."

In the House, the prespect is equally cheering. We have learned from a friend personally known to many of the Members, who has taken some pains to acquire information on the subject, as well as from our own knowledge of the sentiments of others, obtained directly from themselves, that while the greater pertion of the moderate Whigs will certainly sustain the measure, quite a number belonging to the Democratic party have expressed as inclination to unite with them 'on this middle ground, for the purpose of settling finally the vexed question of the Currency.

At present, we have reason to believe that the Bill furnished by Secretary Forward will be re-gaided as another "Compromise Act," and passed by a PATRIOTIC instead of a PARTY vote. [Madisonian.
